Subject: [E-impact] What is an IAB Program?

Hi all,
   Since some of the e-impact folks are fairly new to the IETF, I wanted to provide some additional context on what an IAB program is:

Traditionally the IAB has taken an interest in a number of architectural areas that require long-term perspective and may involve various activities and deliverables. The IAB has organized the work in such areas in the form of programs to enable long term activities scoped and managed by the IAB, while allowing non-IAB members with the required expertise to participate and contribute to the work. More info at https://www.iab.org/activities/programs/

If you have any questions regarding the operation/logistics of IAB programs please feel free reach out to Alvaro, Brian, Carlos, Jari or me and we will be happy to discuss them.

Thanks
Suresh

> Hi all,
>   The IAB intends to create a new program focused on the Environmental impacts of Internet Technology. The program targets topics not yet progressed into concrete standards or research efforts in the IETF or IRTF while also being a coordination point for work across multiple WGs/RGs, and a venue to highlight ongoing work in the IETF/IRTF as well as external SDOs.
